

Ceremonial in Parade and at Kamehameha's Lofty Statue This Morning

from Maui, Hawaii and Kauai, and a goodly gathering.

Native Orders Cheered.

Cheers along the line greeted the next two organizations—the Hui Kamehameha and the Hui Kaahumanu. The Kamehameha men made a fine appearance as they marched past with neat suits of black and with black hats, wearing for color rich feather capes of yellow or red. Many prominent men of the islands, including Mayor Lane, walked in this group.

Women of the Hui Kaahumanu wore rich black boleros and black hats with ostrich plumes. They wore touches of yellow, a yellow lei about the neck and a yellow badge on the left breast.

A huge banner of yellow and blue—the colors of the Kamehameha Society—announced this organization, which marched in white with a touch of blue in the leis they wore, and badges at the breast of red and blue, fringed with gold.

Behind these came the two departments of the Hui OIwi-Hawaii's own, or, being translated into English, mine own country. All white they wore and made a fine appearance as they marched.

Japanese umbrellas in lieu of hats were the noticeable feature of those who made up the Court Lunallilo, 6600, A. O. F., section of the parade. This was one of the longest divisions of the entire line. Practically all of the men in this section were young or middle-aged, and marched in good order, keeping perfect time, two abreast.

Longshoremen Are Fine Body. Then came the famous red-shirted group, the men of the Hui Poela, longshoremen from the waterfront, broad shouldered and brawny. Everywhere these men brought cheers. They wore black hats and black trousers, setting off well their shirts of red with large white buttons. In their left hands they carried blue leis.

Behind the men came the women of the Hui Poela, also dressed in black, carrying blue leis.

Old-Time Leader There.

Capt. Henri Berger, former leader of the Hawaiian band, looking every bit as spry and as happy as in years gone by, did his part proudly at the head of the band from the Boys' Industrial school.

Dressed in the old uniform of white, with a lei of yellow about his neck, Capt. Henri marched, beating time for those behind. The boys from Waialeale wore similar costumes, white with yellow leis, and played splendid music.

Came next the Hui o na Manawale, Latter Day Saints, women dressed in white and carrying black umbrellas—a double column of at least 100. These carried in their hands also leis of blue and white, and many young women and girls marched with the older ones.

Alumnae of Kawaiahao marched in white, bearing yellow badges and yellow leis. Representatives of the Kamehameha alumni came next bearing pennants of blue and white.

Last of the long parade was the Kaohelaiani Riding Club, made up of 16 women riders. At the head of these rode Mrs. Joe Fern, wife of the former mayor, and Princess Theresa Belliveau, president and vice-president of the club.

Eight of the pa-u riders wore black capes and yellow skirts, four wore black capes and purple skirts, and four others wore black capes and green skirts.

As the procession reached the street next to the Judiciary square, it swung sharply to the right and passed in behind the crowd that had already gathered there, swinging around again to form a circle about the statue of Kamehameha.

The Star-Bulletin is now installed in the NEW STAR-BULLETIN BUILDING, 125 MERCHANT STREET, next to the Stangenwald. Phone 4911 to all departments.

Civilization Materially Advanced During Reign of Kamehameha First

Aside from being the first of a line of kings under whose dynasties civilization advanced through the years and placed the Hawaiian Islands on the threshold of a new era in which remarkable deeds were accomplished, Kamehameha I, the "Great King," whose memory is honored today, has gone down in history as the prime leader of his race—one who saw the needs of his people and gave his life work to fulfill them.

By conquest in 1819 he united the islands of the Hawaiian group, bringing them under one government and closer into the bonds of cordial relations.

He was the originator and proclaimer of the "Law of Freedom," which held that the women and children, and the old people of the islands, might go about without fear of being molested.

A firm believer in the doctrines of the "new religion," he is accredited with having paved the way to Christianity in the islands. Had he lived a year longer, he might have done still greater in this respect, but he died in 1819, one year prior to the arrival here of the pioneer missionaries.

One of his greatest accomplishments was his encouragement of farming among the people of the islands.

As a soldier he was fearless. His warriors respected and loved him. He was ever a schemer—scheming for the betterment of the Hawaiian race.

Because of these accomplishments, the memory of Kamehameha the Great is honored today, hundreds of persons paying tribute to the man referred to time and again as "The Father of Hawaii."

CHEERING THOUSANDS URGE THEIR FAVORITES ONWARD AT RACE TRACK

Morning Card Draws Larger Crowd Than Saturday; Harness Events Open Day

Before a crowd of fully 4000 people that packed grand stand, boxes, free stand and paddock, the second day of racing opened this morning with a fine program, starting with harness events. Interest was keen as on Saturday and the lovers of the harness game were out in full force to enjoy their favorite sport.

The first race on the card was for Hawaiian-bred horses, trotting and pacing, one mile, for amateur drivers. Purse $150; one heat. J. F. Colburn, Theodore Roosevelt, with J. F. Colburn, Jr., handling the ribbons, was first; E. Hopkins' Carmalta, driven by Haene, was second and Miss Daisy Colburn's Bell Boy third. Carmalta led for the first half, when Theodore Roosevelt came up, took the lead and led to the tap, winning easily by two lengths.

Second Race—Free-for-all, trotting and pacing, one mile, best three in five heats, for a purse of $200. Angus Phee's Denervo, Darcy driving, won; Tom Hollinger's Welcome Boy, Jack Gibson, driving, second; J. T. Silva's Harold D., Haene driving, third. Denervo won in straight heats; time, 2:13.45, 2:12.25 and 2:14. Horses were in positions of final result at the finish of each heat.

Third Race—Half-mile Roman race for enlisted men of United States Army; purse $100. Murphy and Riley, Sgt. Highfill rider, Troop H, won; Gabie and Bill, with Sgt. Fleishman, Troop G, rider, second. Rowdy and Hans, Sgt. Belmont, scratched. Gabie and Bill got away to a good start and led to the stretch, when Murphy and Riley drew up. Coming down the stretch the pair with the Celtic monsters drew steadily away and won by a good two lengths' margin. Time, 0:56.15.

Fourth Race—Three-quarters of a mile, Hawaiian-bred, weight for age, Cup and purse $250. This race brought about an unfortunate mix-up, being run first to a false start and declared no race. Then the horses were lined up for a start and this time were gotten away with the dropping flag. Col. H. A. Baldwin's Dutch Parrot won, J. M. Spalding's Ladylike second, L. von Tempsky's Wallaby third. Time, 1:20.

On the second attempt Dutch Parrot got away to a good start and won easily by a wide margin. In the first fiasco Skyscraper made better time than did the winner of the race.

CAPT. BERGER'S WAIALEE BAND MAKES IMPRESSION AT TODAY'S EXERCISES

A feature of the parade today was the first appearance of the new boys' industrial school band, reorganized only a few months ago by Capt. Henri Berger, founder of the Hawaiian Band. The band is composed of 20 boys, who play exceptionally well for beginners. They played at the races this afternoon, and this evening will be the guests of Supt. Frederick Anderson at the Bijou theater.

The members of the band are new musicians, having had only three months of instruction under Capt. Berger. The kapellmeister is making bi-monthly visits to the industrial school, and is assisted by James Kuoho and Alfred Kane, instructors at the institution.

Superintendent Anderson yesterday released 60 inmates of the school on leave, to return to the institution tomorrow.
